

Lefebvre group, the European leader in legal and tax knowledge, is committed to guaranteeing access to the law working in collaboration with public institutions to support the rule of law.

Access to law is a crucial issue in a democratic society, because it guarantees equality in front of the law and enables everyone to assert their rights and duties. From its earliest roots, over 130 years ago, our Group has recognised the vital importance of access to law.

Manifesto for Access to law

Our founders set out with a vision because they understood the needs of their time. Throughout history, our companies have enriched their offerings to keep pace with the increasingly complex world we live in. What a noble adventure! Indeed, without the rule of law, Lefebvre Sarrut does not exist.

And vice versa: without legal publishers and training, there is no rule of law. Lefebvre Sarrut is the mirror of our democratic societies, made up of rights and duties. We are proud that our company facilitates access to law and knowledge. That it contributes to respect for the foundations of our democracies.

Making law more intelligible and operational

The field of law is complex and multi-faceted. To help our professional clients and their clients comply with the regulations and take advantage of the law to develop their business, we impose rigorous working rules on ourselves.

We create high-quality, reliable and updated content, solutions and training, whether free access or paid-for. Our content creators, whether internal or external, are recognised experts in their fields.

We are committed to the controlled use of AI, always under human supervision. This means using only reliable resources, respecting our AI Policy and ensuring the security of the data we use.

We do our best to make our content understandable and appropriate for our various audiences, who have different levels of expertise. To achieve this, we are working towards an accessibility by design approach.

Providing access to the law for as many people as possible

For Lefebvre group, “ensuring access to the law as many people as possible” means giving every individual the opportunity to access reliable legal information, directly or through professionals or associations, to understand their rights and obligations.
